Each time a child enters foster care or alternative placement, whether voluntarily or by court order, the agency is required to file a complaint for support through the Domestic Relations Office (DRO). Once the complaint is filed, notices are sent to the parents, ordering each of them to appear for a support conference.

Who has to pay child support?

When will the support conference be scheduled?

Parties will receive their support conference notices in the mail advising them of the date and time of their scheduled support conference.

How will the child support amount be determined?

Federal law requires each state to adopt Child Support Guidelines. Under the Pennsylvania guidelines, both parents are responsible for the costs of raising their child(ren). The amount that each parent must contribute is calculated based on each parent's income. The guidelines take into account the cost of raising a child and other support obligations.

What if I disagree with the amount I am required to pay?

If an agreement is not reached at the conference, a hearing will be scheduled. The officer may enter a temporary Order called an Interim Order, so support begins being paid until the case is resolved. The case is then scheduled to be heard by a Hearing Officer.

What happens if I fail to appear for the support conference?

Failure to appear as directed by the court is a serious matter which could result in a paternity finding and a support order being entered in your absence.

I am required to meet certain conditions before my child can return home and I cannot afford these extra expenses and child support. What can I do?

At the support conference, bring proof of the expenses related to family reconciliation and/or your agency plan. The officer may consider these expenses in establishing the support amount.

What if my circumstances have changed since the child support order was entered?

Whenever there is a change in circumstance after the order is entered, a Petition to Modify can be filed to have the order reviewed. This paperwork is available in our Docketing Division or on our web site.

How long do I have to pay support to the agency?

Child support does not automatically stop. In Pennsylvania, support stops when a child is emancipated (self-supporting), which is usually when the child reaches the age of 18, or graduates high school, whichever occurs last. However, when a child is in the physical care of an agency, the agency can collect support from both parents until the child reaches the age of 21 if the child remains in care. Once the child is released from the agency, a termination order is prepared to terminate the case. If you owe any arrears at that time, an arrears payment will be established. You will receive a copy of this order in the mail.

What if I am already paying support for this child?

Once we receive the complaint for support from the agency, the obligation for the child in placement will be terminated on your current case. If there is more than one child on the order, an Administrative Petition to Modify the order may be filed by our office.

What do I need to bring with me to the conference?

- Social Security card
